

Re-Application to the Mental Health Court

An applicant will be prohibited from making a further application to the Nova Scotia Mental Health Court Program (the “Program”) on the same set of charges that were previously dealt with by the Program, except in special circumstances where additional significant and new information is available and presented through the applicant’s counsel.

Former applicants and participants who make an application within one year of completing their involvement with the Program will be required, through their counsel, to provide information to the Program in support of a further application.

If a former applicant or participant has not had any involvement with the Program for over a year, then the application process will proceed in the normal course.

In all cases, the final decision of admissibility to the Program rests with the Nova Scotia Mental Health Court Team and requires the consent of the Crown Attorney.
